London Citizens is the capital's largest and most diverse community alliance. Through its broad network of community leaders and local civil society institutions it brings the concerns of London's most sidelined communities to the attention of powerful institutions and individuals. London Citizens' campaigns have created real change in many of the capital's truly deprived neighbourhoods.

We are looking for talented men and women, usually in their final year of Undergraduate, or finishing off their Masters. You need to be interested in people, interactive, well-organised and with a sense of humour. Other desirable qualifications include language skills, experience with changing your local community and a keen interest in all political issues.

You could be employed on a number of projects: Possibilities include working on the getting marginalized workers a Living wage; working in East London on the CitySafe campaign to tackle violence through rebuilding a community; working with migrants and asylum seekers as part of the Strangers into Citizens campaign.

Qualities should include political awareness, ability to work in a diverse group and on your own initiative; and strong interpersonal and relational skills.
